Forecast For Southwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Wednesday 16 Jun 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Thunderstorms likely overnight. Dry with some sunny spells on Thursday.

This Evening and Tonight:
Cloud spreading across all areas through the evening and showers move in from the south. Overnight these showers could turn heavy and possibly thundery, especially in the east. Western areas becoming drier through the early hours. Minimum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Thursday:
Heavy showers in the east quickly clearing to leave a mostly dry day. Although initially cloudy, skies will gradually clear from the west, providing sunny spells for most later on. Maximum temperature 22 deg C (72 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Breezy and showery on Friday, at times quite heavy with risks of thunderstorms. Drier on Saturday with sunny spells. The risk of heavy, and possibly thundery showers returns on Sunday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.